PARTNERSHIPS FOR FIRST NATIONS PUBLIC LIBRARY WEEK!

Atikameksheng Anishnawbek Public Library partnered with the Greater Sudbury Public Library this year, to offer unique programming in honour of First Nations Public Library Week. The two libraries hosted three major events throughout the Sudbury region, including jingle dress dancing, a drum circle and traditional story telling (at left, with Mary Fraser from Atikameksheng Anishnawbek).

Meanwhile in James Township...

The public library staff in Elk Lake worked with members of Matachewan First Nation, the Timiskaming Child Care Centre and the local public school to organize a full afternoon of events. This partnership offered participants story time, a cooking class for how to make bannock and a craft lesson for making traditional dream catchers.

Congratulations on these fantastic partnerships!

First Nations Public Library Week 2017 Evaluations

With the 2017 celebration of FNPL Week behind us, the annual evaluation is now available for all First Nation public libraries to complete. This quick and easy online form gathers important data that assists the next planning committee to organize a successful program every year. This year’s evaluation will be available through Google Forms until March 24, 2017.

The annual celebration of First Nations Public Library Week took place February 13-18, 2017. Now in its 17th year, the program has gained some unique and unexpected interest from many sources. Even though this year’s celebration was unable to offer a launch event in a First Nation community, many of our First Nation public libraries hosted events and activities for all ages. Several municipal libraries in Ontario and university libraries have taken an interest in the program as well, sporting the posters and creating displays in support of the celebration.

This year’s committee worked hard to put together a program that was reflective of all our First Nation Public Libraries, offering a theme and customized poster that received widespread attention. Indigenous leadership from across the province stood up in support of the program, offering testimonials and endorsement for the role of public libraries in our communities.

Visit the First Nations Public Library Week website to see what leadership from the Anishinabek Nation and the Association of Iroquois and Allied Indians had to say about the celebration.

At the request of the FNPLW committee, OLS - North hosted a poster session at the 2017 OLA Super Conference. The one-day event on February 2, was conducted to promote the program to new audiences and create awareness for the upcoming celebration.
IN THE SPOTLIGHT

WELCOME NEW LIBRARIANS!

Sheshegwaning First Nation – April Folz

As the new librarian in Sheshegwaning First Nation, April started working in September 2016. She spent four months going through books and downsizing the collection, since the library was moved to a new, smaller location. April officially reopened the library's doors on January 9, 2017.

She was born and raised in Toronto, though her mother's family is from Cornwall/Quebec/Toronto area, and her father's family is from Serpent River First Nation. April's family moved to northern Ontario when she was 16 and they lived in Blind River and Cutler.

April has always loved books and reading. It is very rare to see her without a book in hand. She also enjoys listening to music of all kinds. She is a mother to four children, ages 13, 12, 5 and 1. She also has an older stepson and a daughter in law, and she and her partner foster a two-year-old. So far, April's favourite part about working in the library is interacting with the people who pop in, and seeing her own kids interact with others.

Nipising First Nation – Randy Penasse

Randy began working as Nipissing's new librarian on January 30, 2017. He is a citizen of Nipissing First Nation and grew up in Garden Village, where his father’s family is from. His mother’s family is from Dokis First Nation, and Randy spent many summers and holidays there as well. He has two wonderful boys with his partner Tammy and he holds a background in business.

Randy has spent the last few years coordinating projects for Nipissing that include a Hydro One Energy Pilot, a Diabetes Integrated Service Team and NFN’s Beautification effort. He enjoys helping Nipissing grow and seeing the benefits for all of its citizens come to fruition. Interacting with community members is especially gratifying for Randy, and the community is excited the for the library to have a fresh face and voice.

Randy hopes to do everything he can to continue building upon the library’s services and create a friendly atmosphere that encourages learning and opportunity!

In addition to April and Randy, four other librarians have recently joined the First Nation Public Libraries community. If you'd like to reach out, or if you expect to cross paths at any upcoming events, please take a moment to welcome our newest colleagues!

Chippewas of the Thames First Nation – Cynthia Tribe

Kanhiote Tyendinaga Territory – Barb Ross

M’Chigeeng First Nation – Connie Freeman

Ojibways of Onigaming – Miranda Shebagegit
First Nation Communities READ is underway for another year. This year, the focus is on Young Adult and Adult titles from First Nation, Metis and Inuit authors/illustrators. The program is excited to have over 50 nominated titles this year, which speaks to the immense talent that can be found in First Nation communities and the conviction of publishers who ensure that these stories are heard.

The short list of selected titles will be announced in early May and then reviewed by a panel of First Nation librarian judges. The winning title will be announced shortly afterwards. The selected title’s author/illustrator will then embark on a short tour of First Nation Public libraries in late June or early July.

Each FN library in Ontario will receive a FNCR poster and a copy of each of the selected titles in the shortlist. For more information, please visit:

STRATEGIC ACTION GROUP

The Strategic Action Group is planning a joint gathering with the northern and southern FNPLs, in North Bay on May 9-11, 2017.

Please anticipate 2.5 days of exciting sessions and activities. The agenda will include networking meetings, committee updates and round table discussions, among other things.

We are very excited to be planning this event, since the north and south haven’t met in several years!

Our plan is to deliver great outcomes that work towards the betterment of our libraries and communities. This year, you are being encouraged to invite your community Chief, a councillor or your supervisor for a portion of the gathering.

More details will follow soon. We hope to see you and your support person there!

From your committee members:
Karen Foster, Sheri Mishibinijima & Sabrina Saunders

FNCR @ OLA Super Conference

This year at the OLA Superconference the Southern Ontario Library Service was excited to have the author and illustrator of First Nation Communities Read 2016-2017 present a session.

Jennifer Harrington and Michael Arnott spoke about their writing process for the selected, Spirit Bear, as well as their passion for activism. Both Jennifer and Michael have been able to visit a few First Nation communities throughout the past eight months and Michael talked about how much it meant to him to have such great experiences with children during the presentations.

For more information about Spirit Bear, please visit www.ecobooks4kids.com.
Missing Nimama
Melanie Florence
Ages 8 + (2016 TD Canadian Children’s Literature Award Winner)
Kateri is a young girl, growing up in the care of her grandmother. We see her reaching important milestones, like her first day of school, first dance, first date, wedding, and first child, along with her mother who is always there, watching her daughter growing up without her.
Told in alternating voices, Missing Nimama is a story of love, loss, and acceptance, showing the human side of a national tragedy. An afterword by the author provides a simple, age-appropriate context for young readers. Includes a glossary of Cree terms.

Take Us to Your Chief
Drew Hayden Taylor
Adult Fiction
The nine stories in this collection span all traditional topics of science fiction - from peaceful aliens to hostile invaders; from space travel to time travel; from government conspiracies to connections across generations. Yet Taylor's First Nations perspective draws fresh parallels, likening the cultural implications of alien contact to those of the arrival of Europeans in the Americas, or highlighting the impossibility of remaining a “good Native” in such an unnatural situation as a space mission.
Infused with Native stories and variously mysterious, magical and humorous characters, Take Us to Your Chief is the perfect mesh of nostalgically 1950s-esque science fiction with modern First Nations discourse.

Jay Odjick and Robert Munsch
Well-known Indigenous artist Jay Odjick has recently teamed up with the renowned children's author, Robert Munsch, on his latest book titled Blackflies.
When Odjick was approached to illustrate the book’s images, he accepted the opportunity without hesitation. CBC's Unreserved interviewed Odjick about his experience working with such a famous author.
Blackflies will be made available in Spring 2017.
Just in time for black fly season!

SPRING GATHERING for FIRST NATION PUBLIC LIBRARIES

Ontario Library Service - North, Southern Ontario Library Service and the Ontario Library Association are working together to organize a joint gathering of ALL First Nation Public Libraries in SPRING 2017.

MAY 9-11, 2017
CLARION RESORT PINEWOOD PARK
NORTH BAY, ON

The First Nation Strategic Action Group will be the lead planning committee for this unique event. More information from the committee on page 4.
Public libraries in northern Ontario often have to get creative to engage their communities in library programming. First Nation public libraries regularly offer cultural arts and crafting, and OLS – North is hoping to add to the culture of making in these communities, by injecting some high-tech and low-tech options into their library programming.

In March 2017, a series of rotating makerspace kits will be delivered to northern First Nation public libraries. As part of a unique program, two sets of 14 different makerspace kits will rotate to each library every three months. The goal of the program is to introduce technology that would otherwise be unavailable, and to engage community members, especially youth. The kits listed below will be included in the special rotation - they can be created by any library for ready-to-go library programming!

NATIONAL ABORIGINAL LANGUAGES DAY
MARCH 31

For more than 23 years, the Assembly of First Nations has declared March 31 the national day to honour and celebrate Indigenous languages in Canada. The day is used across the nation to remember the challenges that Indigenous languages have faced over the years, but it also celebrates the resiliency and revitalization of our languages in recent history.

Ontario Library Service - North offers access to many great resources and information for Indigenous languages on its First Nation Languages Portal. As an ever-evolving online resource for First Nation public libraries, the portal can be used by librarians to provide services in various areas of Indigenous language learning and revitalization.

For more information on National Aboriginal Languages Day, please visit www.afn.ca.

THE ADVOCATE

A new publication created by the Chiefs of Ontario is now available for free online. The Advocate, a magazine dedicated to issues and events relevant to Ontario First Nations, is published twice a year. There are now two editions available through the Chiefs of Ontario website, and the magazine is distributed to all 633 First Nations across Canada. The publication offers a wide variety of reading, from politics and governance to arts and current events. The mandate of the magazine is to coordinate information and policy discussion of interest to 133 First Nations in Ontario.
